Gateway to the Klondike

At the peak of the Gold Rush, Skagway was the largest city in Alaska with over 10,000 residents, about ten times more than today. This area is also where Jack London got his inspiration for Call of the Wild while seeking his fortunes and where John W. Nordstrom earned enough from a gold-mine stake to open his first department store in Seattle in 1901.

Going Ashore

When going ashore, please remember to carry your stateroom keycard and a government issued photo ID. Please note that some Shore Excursions cross the Canadian border and your passport might be required.
